At 11.45 a.m. yesterday morning it was announced from Unity House, the railwaymen's headquarters, that-

The Conference has decided by a very, very narrow majority to accept the offer of the Government

Thus, after a period of real critical stress

Thus, after a period of real critical stress, there is to be peace in the railway world.

A Government statement shows that the accepted Government terms do not depart from the principle of standard rates being based on the average and also adhere to the shiding scale. The 5s. increase is to be extended to women and 3l adult men to whom the war wage of 20s. 6d. for women and 35s. for men applies.

An increase of 2s. 6d. is to be made to boys and girls under eighteen. The increase in war wage will be given to men and women who do not, now receive the full war wage, with the exception of drivers and firement, elerical staff, men in receipt of the 12s or 7s per cent, bonus and those employed in the docks and marine departments. departments.

EXTENSION TO IRELAND.

The Government are prepared to deal with individual hardships under the agreement. With regard to retrospective payment, the Government are prepared, if the men desire it, to go into the alternative suggestion that every participant in the agreement should receive a payment based on a calculation of the higher pay for the period prior to January 1.

The Government are willing to extend to Ireland the principle of the proposals, the settlement for Ireland to apply from the same dates as operating in Great Britain.

The Government intimate that the railwaymen accept the proposals and a fixed sum of £1 as retrospective payment.

"A VERY DIFFICULT JOB."

Mr. Thomas Says Result Was in Doubt Right Up to Last Moment.

Right Up to Last Moment.

"This has been a very difficult job," was Mr. Thomas' comment to a Press representative.

"It is no use disguising the fact that there was considerable diversion of opinion amongst the delegates, and up to the last moment it was doubtful what the result would be.

"I hope and believe that the men will accept it as, an honourable settlement, in industrial questions, and, in my judgment, was the only way of meeting an ahonomal situation."

He added: "There is a very large amount of money concerned, some millions, which goes into the pockets of the railwaymen."

Mr. C. T. Cramp, the railwaymen's president, said: "I think the result bears out what I said last week, when I stated that the offer of the Government was not then understood."

TRAIN CRIME MYSTERY: WIDE HUNT FOR ASSAILANT. ADMIRANTIRPITZ TO

Passenger Who Jumped from Rear Carriage at Lewes and Crossed the Lines.

NURSE SHORE'S CONDITION STILL GRAVE.

Complete mystery surrounds the escape of the unknown man who, in the London-St. Leonards train, brutally attacked and robbed Miss Florence Nightingale Shore, the heroic nurse who had devoted herself to the wounded in South Africa and France.

Nurse Shore, whose condition yesterday was reported to be very grave, is a fair-haired woman of fifty-two. She is a godchild and distant relative of Florence Nightingale, a sister of Brigadier-General Shore, D.S.O., and a niece of the Baroness Farina.

The police have circulated a description of jewellery taken from the injured woman, also a description of the young man in a brown suit they are anxious to find.

Scotland Yard officers are actively engaged in the work of tracking down the author of the crime; in fact, there is a general "hue and cry" at the present moment, and it is hoped that the exhaustive efforts of the police will result in an

POLICE DESCRIPTION.

POLICE DESCRIPTION.

The police are satisfied that Miss Shore's assailant left the compartment at Lewes, where the London-Hastings train divides.

Meanwhile the Hastings police have circulated the following description of a man whom they are endeavouring to trace:—

Age, about twenty-eight years, 5ft, 7in, or 5ft, 8in, in height.

Of slight build.

Believed to be clean shaven.

Brown hair.

Dressed in a lightish mixture brown suit.

Such a man is said to have entered Miss.

Dressed in a lightish mixture brown suit. Such a man is said to have entered Miss Shore's carriage when the train left London. She was alone, injured and unconscious when the train reached Bexhill.

There is little doubt that Miss Shore was attacked between London and Lewes. Her assailant—whoever he was—armed with some blunt instrument, caused severe wounds to het head, then propped up the unconscious nurse in a corner, and escaped with her money and jewellery.

Miss Shore's railway ticket was also missing, her lap were found her handbag and an oen book. Both windows of the carriage were closed.

Scotland Yard stated yesterday that the following articles of jewellery which were in Miss.
Shore's possession are missing:—
A ring, set with five diamonds.
A fine gold neck chain with two amethyst drops.

The attack must have been very sudden, the blow struck with sufficient force to render her immediately unconscious, and the ring wrenched from her finger.

JUMPED FROM TRAIN.

Unknown Man's Escape - Platelayers Thought Miss Shore Was Asleep.

It is possible that it was this unknown man who was seen by the guard to jump from one of the rear carriages at Lewes and cross the metals.

When three platslaws of the rear carriages at Lewes and cross the metals.

When three platelayers entered the carriage at Polehill Miss Shore seemed to be asleep in a corner, and it was not until they were nearing Bexhill they noticed blood on the seat.

On arriving at Bexhill they informed the stationnaster.

The wounds suggested that the attack was made some time before this, and it is possible that it occurred while the train was passing through a tunnel.

Medical opinion holds that any of the blows, which must have been inflicted by some blunt instrument, would have been sufficient to render the nurse incapable of further resistance. This accounts for the absence of any sign of a struggle.

AFRIQUE DEATH-ROLL,

556 Lives Lost-Bravery of the "Black Squad."

The total death-roll in the Afrique disaster is 556. In view of comments on the fact that only sengalese and sailors were saved from the Afrique, an inquiry, held at La. Pallice, proves that there was no attempt on the part of the Sengalese to rush the boats, and the crew diall they could for the passengers, the stoken especially staying below until the vessel had struck the rocks.

There was no panic, and the passengers were asked to take their places by the boats, but most of them hesitated to do so owing to the torrific seas then running.

It is established that, when the vessel sprang a leak ten hours out, the pumps became choked with cinders and worked badly, and what might have been a mere accident became a disaster.—Reuter.

"FINAL"?

FOR the moment, there is another settlement of another railway crisis. 'And this settlement has been reached "by a very narrow majority," as Mr. Thomas

We must not put it more optimistically than that; since recent experience proves that the word "final," appended so often to these disputes, is no accurate description of their results.

This happy word had better be given up, as applied to Labour settlements, Government offers, or Trades Union answers. Finality does not exist, because the whole tide of life, on which these disputes depend, is itself rising and falling which is itself rising and falling, shifting and changing, all the time.

Yet each side constantly endeavours to arrive at stability, by talking about an imaginary finality; as though the conditions of any industry, the reward of the wage-carners, and the profit of the employers, could be settled once for all, on a just basis, which should remain a basis for at least a very long time.

That never happens. The policy of waste, or some other more general policy, alters the whole condition of living. That, in turn, reacts upon the particular industry. Once more, there is a demand, a crisis; a settle-And so presumably it will go on until Europe settles down, which at present Europe does not seem likely to do.

We need, then, some constantly shifting or skilfully adaptable standard or principle that will follow the ever-changing conditions of life. We cannot hope to secure this by settling bedrock rates and calling them

That is why the present settlement-"by a narrow majority"—is only a settlement for the present. The word "final" applied to it can only add to the difficulty of arriving at a new agreement, when changed conditions make that, too, inevitable.

"ANOTHER COLD."

SHOULD people with colds in the head be required to wear some mark of the plague, such as a red band round the arm? Should colds be notifiable? Should people with colds be isolated like smallpox patients? What can be done about colds?

Nearly every day we read some learned medical article about them. Or we are invited to study some ingenious criss-cross diagram, illustrating their rises and falls, their rarity or frequency. But we see and read no explanation, diagrammatic or other, of why colds are growing worse.

Long ago, in youth, colds seemed to us to Long ago, in youth, colds seemed to us to be nothing.

One had them and got rid of them and hardly heeded them. Now they descend, "sudden from Heaven like a drooping cloud," and devastate life. They feelworse than measles. They involve fever. [They hamper all activity. They make a man a nuisance to all about him. They make a woman unresentable before here. make a woman unpresentable before her admirers.

Great sums are expended in diagnosing or attempting to cure weird and rare diseases. We know something of sleeping sickness. We have anthrax in wholesome dread. Pyorrhea is the friend of dentists. That is

But it would be better still if the learned, the rich and the philanthropic would also turn time and money and attention to colds. Because one cold may be endurable in one winter; but a cold a month, all through the long months of our interminable winter—well, life is hardly worth living on these lines, for the cold-catcher or his friends.

It is time colds were rationed and con-

She never learnt how to manage servants, how to coax them, how to give them a sufficiency of leisure. The modern woman, being afflicted with an incurable laziness, made the happy and contented servant into a drudge. She worked her all hours of the day and well into the night. The troglodytes of the Victorian era, I suggest, knew better than this.

Conditions such as these are certainly not alluring, especially when one takes into consideration the wages that are now being paid to manual labourers. It is only occasionally one comes across a business man who realises that the necessaries of life are just as expensive for his female staff as for the men.
However, they are not really to blame. It is only human nature to secure employees at as low a salary as possible. The real culprits are the "pin money" girls, who work for a pittance and are partly supported by their parents.

SHOULD BOYS BE EDUCATED ABROAD?

MR. HASELDEN'S drawings of the English bey home for the holiday's describes accurately what I am amazed to find in this country. Such conduct on the part of boys is unknown in any other land.

Is it caused by the English public school system (as I understand, for I was never in school in England), so that boys are not able to play by themselves, but only regulation games? Boys brought up abroad never develop this objectionable brainless behaviour.

Jan, 15.—At this season of the year Jerusalem artichokes are much in request. Since this vegetable will do well in almost any soil and situation, it deserves to be more widely cultivated by the amateur gardener. The tuber should be set out during February. The condition of the proving season is an occasional hoeing.

Jerusalem an enokes make a handsome screen and should be used to break the force of the wind or to hide some unsightly corner.

The natural consequence is that the breathing is affected, the bronchial tubes or bronchi become inflamed, and cough, more or less serious, follows. If neglected the entire respiratory system is weakened, and that way consumption lies. Children suffer more frequently from such complaints than do their elders, the death rate among the very young being truly appalling, and in too many instances due entirely to thoughtless neglect.

HOUSE FURNISHING PROBLEMS TO-DAY.

SUPER-ART CHINTZES, TREA-SURES AND SALES.

By ALISON DE FROIDEVILLE.

This article tells of the writer's experiences in buying things for the home—she being fortunate enough to have secured the house.

URNISHING is not the simple affair that was, a matter merely of notebooks, a list of measurements, cuttings for colour schemes, a pencil and a purse.

I've realised this since we started to furnish that new house. The curtains, for instance.

We got into serious trouble over buying the Chintz, owing to our ignorance.

I took a bit of the wallpaper, a cutting as near as I could get it to the carpet, and sallied forth, complete with husband. A shopper, I think, is more complete with a husband, because he usually carries a cheque-book.

On the way we discussed curtains. I was

On the way we dissussed curtains. I was all for splashes, and he for stripes. We reached the shop, where they treated us rather like guests come to tea. They showed us all over the place.

At last the chintzes. They showed us plenty, and we both fixed on one that combined splashes, stripes, the carpet, the wallpaper and surely everything in the universe. "Good," said David buoyantly, "we'll have eight and a half yards of that," "I beg your pardon?" said the assistant freezingly. "What did you say?" "Eight and a half yards of that," said David, more uncertaintly.

MATCHING THE PICTURES.

"That," said the frock-coated young gentle-man, "is' Maud." I do not know if we could prevail on the artist to repeat 'Maud,' but I will approach him and ascertain. It is the work of Mr. Peter Stew. I presume you are toning in the hangings to one of his pic-tures?"

"We haven't got the pictures yet," I explained. "We get those afterwards, when we can afford it."

we can afford it."

The young magave us up. "Our customers always choose these works"—holding up the sample yard—"to repeat the ribrant colours of the pictures in their room."

"Well, anyhow," said David hastily, "we'd like four yards of that," pointing out an orange and black. "It would make an awfully decent bedspread—that is," he added, remembering "Maud," "if you will introduce me."

me."

"This is 'William and Mary.' We can certainly prevail on the artist to allow you to have a length of this design."

Did you ever? I don't a bit mind art in its place, but all over my curtains, no!

And it will be so worrying for our guests when we say: "Let me pull Maud back to give you more light," or, "William and Mary are beginning to look a little crushed. Jane must iron them over."

At the first sale I sat through everything sared beyond me, except a little bronze child struggling with a python. I had never appreciated bronzes properly till I married David. So I knew it would please him. At the next sale I bid for two things, a dining table and a sofa, and lost both. Prices were dreadful. But I secured another jolly brance of a man struggling with a horse.

The third sale was disastrous. I certainly thought that they were bidding for Lot 506, a washstand, and commenced to bid myself. When it got to 30s, it was knocked down to me. And then I found it was Lot 507, "two gentlemen's hat-boxes, four gentlemen's hats (shabby), a salamander iron and three gentlemen's many " men's spurs."

David asks if I mean him to become a Manxman to use the spurs?

So it went on. When we had moved in we found that we owned six good bronzes, three Bow china figures, a salamander iron, Maud, William and Mary, but no bed for them to rest on, a dinner service whose minimum dish is 18in. long, my miscellaneous lot, and a bronze coffee pot that is supposed to whistle when ready, but boils over instead.

So perhaps it is as well we have no dining the beastly thing, and then at the last you have to rush it.

WOMAN'S CHANCE IN THE MOTOR BUSINESS

By Capt. P. A. BARRON.

SHE was wearing an old leather coat, and Was superintending the work of two motor mechanics who were fittings new piston rings to a customer's car. They broke one, and I watched her as she spoke rather sharply to one of the men and then proceeded to do the work herself.

I may known her for seven or eight years, since the time, in fact, when she first opened a small garage. To-day she employs a number of hands, keeps a fine car for her own use, and has a glittering display of motor vehicles for sale or hire.

"Women can make money in the motor business," she said to me, "if they work at it as seriously as do the men who succeed. I have never felt handicapped in any way.
"To-day lots of girls who have served in the W.A.A.C. or the W.R.A.F. come to ask my advice about starting in the motor business. Just because they have learned to drive a car they seem to think that they are perfectly qualified. Well, they are not.

"In the Services most of them merely drove. They did not know a contact breaker from a differential, and they did not want to. Some of them could not start up a car on a cold morning."

I know many have been bitten by the motoring craze, and, just because they have learned to drive; they are coaxing their relatives to buy garages for them. There are plenty of motor sharks who are anxious to sell them businesses that would not pay the wages of a boy to serve out petrol. "But there is money in motors for those who learn the business thoroughly and have a natural fondness for cars. Those who have merely driven about London dressed in smart uniforms, and who only read about methods of keeping their hands white, are not wanted in the trade to-day."

My friend spoke truly. There is a wonder-

My friend spoke truly. There is a wonderful boom in motoring, and many people with knowledge are making fortunes. But, unfortunately, there are some who use their brains to victimise others.

brains to victimise others.
It is quite an easy matter for an unprincipled person to take a garage that has gone to ruin, put in a few ancient vehicles that have been outwardly renovated, and then sell the "goodwill" of the "old-established concern" at an enormous profit. The purchasers are likely to find that they have been badly "stung." stung.

Women who wish to enter the business should first seek a situation with a firm of good standing. Money may be made out of a garage, but not without knowledge.

WHAT I THINK OF GOING BACK TO SCHOOL

By A SCHOOLBOY.

10-DAY I am packing up my things, and tomorrow I go back to school. Yesterday I hated the idea of returning to school, but last night I broke the ugly green vase that used to stand on the hall mantelpiece and now I feel in a hurry to leave home:

The holidays have been a mixture of rotten and topping.

I have won a good many things, including a football, a submarine, a camera and a fishing-rod; but I've lost a pound note—the wind blew it into the fire when I opened the window blew it into the fire when I opened the window last Sunday; I've had two had colds and spent twice times four days in bed; I've lost my pocket-money for a month ahead through smashing the sound-box on the guv'nor's new gramophone. So, altogether, I haven't done so badly, looking at it both ways.

I'm dashed if know whether I'm glad I'm

Mater said it was through stuffing the bag too full, but really it was the bag that was rotten. This time I'll tie some rope round it. Saying 'Good-bye,' is a rotten business. She'll look all forgiveness at me and kiss me. Then I shall feel a bubbling feeling in my face and the people on the platform will think I'm crying.

THE SETTLEMENT.

Will Tirpitx Ee Tried?-A New Story of General Townshend.

Most PEOULE GAYE a sigh of relief yesterday when the news of the settlement with the railwaymen came out. I know a man in touch with affairs who has stortly maintained ever since the crisis arose that there would be no strike. I have not seen him since the settlement, and shall keep out of his way. However, the result was such a touch-and-go affair that it will ill become him to put on too many 1-told-vouse airs.

Secret Diplomacy.

I wonder how the advocates of "open dip-lomacy" view the secrecy with which the negotiations with the railwaymen were conducted I-Sir Eric Geddes has been conferring with the N.U.R. for over a week, and not smuch about how things were going has been said.

"Tirps" To Be Tried?

It seems the general belief, I find, that the Allies will demand that Admiral Tirpitz shall take his trial alongside the other German wax-criminals. As the author of unrestricted murder and piracy on the high seas, he has certainly earned a place in the dock.

Clearing out.

By the end of March there will be a great British clear-out from Northern France and Southern Belgium. All our troops will have left; kaffirs and Chinamen have gone to their homes, and what little material may remain will be death with by the Ministry of Munitions and the French police.

I hear on good authority that there is a good deal of unrest in Turkey at the present time. The Turks know quite well what is in store for them in the way of Peace terms, and are inclined to express extreme dissatisfaction with everything and everybody

A Townshond Story.

A returned prisoner of war told me yesterday that shortly after the fall of Kut, when he and his fellow captives were paraded for roll call, the Hun commandant took great pleasure in telling the unfortunate men that a British general and his army had surrendered to the Turks. This is the kind of thing that delighted the brutes who ruled the prison camps in Germany.

But the news did not have the desired effect. But the news did not have the desired elect.
After a moment of silence, cheers arose, led by a sergeant of the Coldstream Guards. Thunderstruck, the commandant muttered something about the "mad English." He did not know that the cheers were prompted by admiration for General Townshend and his gallant defence of Kut.

The Cenetaph.

A Finsbury Park correspondent makes the interesting suggestion that the cost of creeting the Cenetaph should be borne by public subscription, and guarantees a donation. It is a patriotic idea, but I fear that it will not appeal to the Office of Works.

The Allied Naval Commission.

A friend—a naval commander, who had a very rough-and-tumble time during the war—sailed from Portsmouth yesterday for Kiel with Vice-Admiral Charlton on "a visit of inspection." ### A Detached Flat?

A Detached Fiat?

Miss Marie Novello, the pianist, tells me that flat-hunting is a terrible business for a musician. "A detached flat" seems the ideal, a house agent told her, but what and where is it? Meanwhile Priscilla Lady Annesley is helping her to house-hunt, which seems at thoroughly kindly act, when one remembers the horrors of that process.

The Tiniest Musician.

The Savy children's ball brought a host of small titled children, who danced to a real Hawaiian orchestra in a garden of leaves and flowers and fruits from the South. One small boy of two who had won a mouth-organ from a box of crackers insisted on joining the or-

The Blase Child.

Children nowadays are not what they used Children nowadays are not what they used to be. This opinion was rather sadly confided to me by Whimsical Walker, the Drury Lane clown, at Lady Coper's children's party at the Mansion House. And "Whimmy," the most famous clown now living, has entertained some millions of children, of all ages.

It was a happy thought of the Lady Mayor-ess to bring in the harlequinade from Drury Lane to amuse her small guests, not many of

Many Happy Returns.

There are two interesting theatrical birth-days to-day. Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Mr. Gordon Craig are both due for con-gratulations. The former has now retired from the stage. But you never know!

It looks as if "Medora" might be post-poned, after all. A burglary at a costumier's has resulted in the disappearance of most of the Oriental dresses that were to be worn in the production. However, no doubt the im-perturbable Mr. Hishin will survive even this.

"Tiger Rose's" Plans.
Miss Marjory Campbell tells me that when "Tiger Rose" ceases to bloom she hopes to take a holiday in her native Canada. She has, however, every intention of returning to this country and making it her theatrical home.

Not the Man.

Colonel Alexander McBean has authorised me to deny the report that he is "A. M."
Whoever the latter gentleman is, he proposed to present £120,000 to the nation, for he will hand over that amount of Funding Loan for cancellation.

Dangerous Travelling.

The outrage on the Brighton line has again reminded us that lone women travelling should be most careful in choosing a compartment in a train, especially on long runs. It is always best to travel with several other women. There is nothing "faddy" or "silly" in doing this, as has been too tragically shown in sorred leave.

No New Thing.

M. Kasimir Proszynski's home kinema which an enterprising contemporary has just discovered is not such a novelty after all. I saw a demonstration of it in the Royal Photography of the property of the propert tographic Society's rooms in the February

Agonising.

Curious people are beginning to ask who is

The Lady Magistrate.
London's first lady magistrate has been sworn in. I used to see Miss Gertrude Tuckwell frequently some years ago at Birchington. She was staying at the time with her aged father, the late Rev. A Wedding.

The young Earl of Maeduff was to have been at St. George's, Hanover-square, yesterday, when the Rev. The worried housewije went back and took her friend's dvice, and then came the great surprise. He had grumbled at cold mutton for months, but now he accepted it, and enjoyed it! He said it was 'five." That the saled was the best he had tasted for years. That he would never complain about cold meat again, so long as he could have "that irrst-rate sauce with it:"

week!

Taking the tip of her friend she also got a bottle of Escoffier Sauce Me'ba, and made a dam't sweet by simply potening a little over ordinary boiled rice. And NOW she is never worried about what to get for dinner. With Escoffier Sauces there are so many apprecisely dishes that can be mide with very little trouble and expense.

And the moral of this is—never be without Escoffier Sauces for cold meats, stews, soups, salads, hot meats, fish, and sweets.

But I went up to my room and cried, without in the least knowing why.

I went and looked at them with a faint sense of comfort. Perhaps, after all, he would come to-morrow—perhaps he would realise how lonely I really was.

But to-morrow came, and no sign of him, no word. And the next day the same.

"Is that you, Meg? It's I, Leslie,"
"There was a moment of silence, and I knew what he was thinking. Why had I not called him by his Christian name? For there was a subtle change in his voice as he said again constrainedly—"

THE UNWANTED CALLER.

I CAUGHT my breath with a flutter of fear, and I cried hurriedly:

"Not this evening. He is coming to dinner. You mustr't come this evening. I am sorry." Perhaps my voice didn't sound very convincing, for after the slightlest pause he said:

"Is that the truth, Mog?"

I laughed nervously.

"Of course, it is. What do you mean?"
Another pause.

"Can I see you to morrow then?" And then, as I did not answer at once, he went on: "Are you trying to drive me mad? I've been patient long enough, I think."

In a sawered sharply. I did not a see tim. I had hardly given him a thought since last we met; and then—afraid lest my voice had betrayed my feelings too much.—I added hurriedly:

My heart gave a little thump and almost seemed to stop. I clutched at the arms of my chair as I heard Mary come from the kitchen and cross the little hall.

It was Leslie, I was sure! He had not been satisfied with my evasions, had not believed that Jeffry was coming to see me, and had decided to call round himself.

Wild ideas of pleading a headache flashed through my brain. I would go to my room and tell Mary to say that I had gone to bed and could see nobody. I had sprung to my feet, which was not could see nobody. I had sprung to my feet, with the room.

I stopped short with a little indrawn breath; I tried to laugh.

"Oh, it's you! I thought"—I was conscious of the warm colour that had rushed to my checks—"I thought it was somebody else," I finished lamely.

"Somebody more welcome than a am?" he asked; and I said, "Oh, no!" with such am mistakable fervour that he laughted.

THE TREATMENT THAT CURES BAD LEGS.

ADVERTISERS' ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The National Infirmary for Bad Legs has for some years past directed the entire skill and research of its Medical Staff to the perfection of a treatment in their possession which effects a permanent and lasting cure of this most distressing malady of Bad Legs. Success of a gratifying character has crowned their efforts, and to-day thousands of patients who have been cured by this treatment testify to the benefits they have received.

What This New Treatment Is.

This new method is known as the Tremol method of treating bad legs, and by it the Patient is cured without a particle of pain, and without a moment's rest, without neglecting work for one single instant, and without the possibility of a failure, because this new method permits of no relapse, and the patient is cured, to stay cured for all time. But this is not all. Every form of bad legs succumbs to this new treatment. Varicose ulcers melt away, and, combined with varicose veins, disappear. Swollen and painful legs become painless. Diseased bone comes away. Tubercular bone and ulcers heal up. Inflammation and irritation, become things of the past. Why is this? Because Tremol Treatment why is this? Because From the stacks and removes the cause, and if the case is taken in hand—for if it is incurable it will not be accepted—it will be separately and specially prescribed for and attended to until the cure is complete. This no other treatment even pretends to do, for in other so-called treatments the same thing is supplied to everyone alike, and there it ends.

A Great Advantage to Bad Leg Sufferers.

This Tremol Treatment has one great advantage over other treatments for bad legs. It can be applied in the sufferer's own home with ease, and with a certainty of obtaining a cure. There are many different courses of Tremol Treatment, and after the history of each case has been studied the course most suitable is prescribed, and, if necessary, modified.

FASHIONS FOR NURSERY FOLKS. FAIRY

W OOLLY scarves are the very thing to keep the cold winds away from small girls. A deep firinge adorned the gold and purple fleecy scarf which a little maiden wore when she scurried along the gravelled paths of the park on her secotor the other attenuous.

LEMON LINEN embroidered in blue thread was the smart little suit smart little suit worn by a tiny boy
when he held his fourth birthday party the other day. Its narrow belt and trim sailor collar made him very proud.

ALL IN ONE arz the newest rompers which admirably protect the clothes of the small nursery person. The front opening is prettily laced with a silk tasselled cord, and a cord to match forms the waistband.

A DANGLING TASSEL A DANGLING TASSEL of gold tinsel made a small maiden feel very pleased with her Foch blue duvetyn tam o' ahanter, which was effectively finished with a smart upturned brim of velvet to match.

BRIGHT RED duvetyn was the cosy material used for the wrap coat of a three-year-old maiden. MARJORIE,

Bands of white rabbit adorn the sleeves and hem of this simple little party frock.

e can go to his party happy if wears a little suit of black lvet with a waistcoat and unded collar of pleated georgette.

UNCLE DICK'S LETTER.

The Daily Mirror Office, Jan. 15. MY DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS,—

Isn't it splendid news about the pantomimes! Over 300 free seats for my nephews and nieces! I wish you could all go, but—we can't have everything we want. Now get busy and read all the dry "rules" and-send your little letter to Pip and Squeak at once. My pets will help me to judge the best letters. Have had to hold over to-day's instalment of "Lost in the Jungle"-sorry.

Your affectionate Uncle Dick

GREAT PANTOMIME "TREAT." Our 300 Free Seats for "Children's Mirror" Readers. WRITE a letter to my famous pets, Pip and Squeak, and win a free seat at the pantomime! Now isn't that an offer to be jumped

It is a little New Year's treat I have arranged for my nephews and nieces. There are over 300 free seats to be given away!

"Please what have I to do?" I hear you say.

Well now, attention, please. All children up to and not more than fifteen years of age may take part in the competition.

part in the competition.

Write a letter, not more than 100 words in length (on a posteard will do), to the celebrated Pip and Squeak. Address your letter, Pip and Squeak (Pantomime), The Daily Mirror, 23, Bouverie-street, London, E.C. 4.

In the letter say anything you like—what you think of pantomime, how you love going to school, how you laugh at the peter daily adventanced by the peter of the peter of the peter of the peter daily adventance in the peter of the peter of the peter daily adventance in the peter of the peter daily adventance in the peter of the peter of the peter daily adventance in the peter of the peter tures—anything so long as it is interesting—analysis.

But consideration will be given to the age of the competitor. To the writers of the best and funniest letters sent in a free ticket for the pantomine playing in the suburb or town in which they live will be dispatched.

Unfortunately there isn't a pantomine in every city or town, so that only children living in the areas given below will be able to compete. At the following London and provincial theatres the various managements have very kindly placed seats at the disposal of The Daily Mirror:—

Lyceum—"Dick Whittington and the Royal Box Kennington-"Aladdin" 22 Borough Stratford—"Dick Whittington" 22 Manchester—Theatre Royal—"Sindbad" 22 Palace Theatre

Leeds - Grand - " Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son "...

Write-your letter to Pip and Squeak at once. The closing date of the competition is Monday, January 26. Letters must arrive not later than the first post on that day.

All the free pantomime tickets are for matinee performances on various dates early next month.

WELCOME "EARTHQUAKE" IN MY COAL CELLAR.

Sent to fill the coal-scuttle by Angeline, my pets were shocked to find only one lump of coal left. Some more coal "arrived," however, a few moments later.
